

June 23, 1941.

Davega-City Radio, Inc.,
76 Ninth Ave.,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

It has just been called to my attention that there is an outstanding bill due your firm by the Newark Eagles. Your representative, in your Newark Store, Mr. Wagner was asked to notify you to send me a duplicate bill, as the original must have gone astray in the mail, it has never been received in this office. Mr. Wagner was to have contacted you about two weeks ago. As soon as the bill is received and has been checked with the statement on file at this office, a check for the balance due will be mailed to you.

In the meantime, I ordered fifteen uniforms for a Boys Club here in Newark. I understood you were holding up the delivery of the merchandise until the payment of the outstanding bill. I have asked your Newark Store to send the suits to me C. O. D. I cannot understand your firm assuming this attitude to a customer, who is supposed to have established credit with them.

I would appreciate hearing from you if there is something of which I am unaware, which has taken place where my account is concerned.

Very truly yours,

EM:CCJ